

PETER TOBIA / Inquirer Staff Photographer

Clay Johnson, a full-time artist from Philadelphia, takes advantage of the beautiful spring weather to paint the branches of a tree framing the train bridge in the background along Kelly Drive.

Philadelphia waves its own flag

TOM GRALISH / Inquirer Staff Photographer

The city held a party yesterday to mark the 112th anniversary of its municipal flag. Above, Iraq war veteran Spec. Anthony Fusetti accepts a special signed flag.

Members of the Kearny Elementary School chorus wave Philadelphia flags as they perform at the ceremony, held on Penn Square and sponsored by the city and Partners for Civic Pride. Among treats were cupcakes iced in Philadelphia's official blue-and-gold motif.